Global Housing Crisis – Local Responses?

13 October 22

Launch Research Center New Social Housing

Housing and crisis are terms closely connected and debated jointly not only in the academic realm. Responses are manifold and often local, while drivers are complex and interconnected globally. Thinking across scales, beyond disciplinary boundaries and territorial borders in this event we ask: What are necessary forms of knowledge about policy, housing design and everyday life that need to be considered in housing research? How could possible hands-on approaches look like when it comes to housing provision and activism? What is the social dimension of (social) housing?
